Dear Elena,

Professor Richards has been in Washington, D.C., this week, and my calendar has been crowded this fall as I'm serving in a new administrative role. I thus apologize that we have not had time to review the documents. They did arrive and they are on my desk in my other office. We will try to look them over this weekend,

Clay

Dear Professors Calvert and Richards,

I know that with the start of the school year you must be very busy. However, since our exchange of e-mails two weeks ago, I've been eagerly awaiting your evaluation of the primary source materials I mailed you -- and which are posted on our website, www.judgewatch.org [sidebar panel: Press Suppression: The New York Times]. Especially is this so as there is a statute of limitations (I believe a year) for bringing a lawsuit against TheTimes based on its November 7, 2004 column, "When the Judge Sledgehammered The Gadfly". Do you agree that such a lawsuit is ideal for advancing the recommendations of your article, "Journalistic Malpractice: Suing Jayson Blair and the New York Times for Fraud and Negligence" -- indeed, for summary judgment based on the substantiating primary source materials?

Is there a day and time next week when it would be convenient for me to call?

Thank you.
