BACKGROUND OF THE COMMISSION

Created in 1977 by an amendment to the New York State Constitution, the Commission on Judicial Nomination of the State of New York plays an important role in our State's government: its purpose is to see that the judges who sit on New York's highest court, the Court of Appeals, are chosen from among the State's most highly qualified and accomplished judges, practicing lawyers and legal scholars. Since its inception, the Commission has fulfilled this function by nominating to the Governor a small number of carefully considered candidates to fill vacancies on the Court of Appeals. The Commission's mandate is a powerful one: the Constitution requires that the Governor choose Judges of the Court of Appeals only from the nominees of the Commission.

BACKGROUND OF THE COURT OF APPEALS

The Commission's mandate reflects the importance of the Court of Appeals itself. In addition to being the highest court of the State of New York, the Court of Appeals is considered to be one of the most significant courts in the country. It plays a key role not only in interpreting the law of the State of New York, but in shaping precedent across the nation.

The Court of Appeals consists of a Chief Judge and six Associate Judges, each of whom is appointed for a fourteen-year term and is subject to mandatory retirement at age 70. The Judges of the Court collectively decide all motions and appeals before them, thus demanding from the members of the Court not only legal excellence but also collegiality and a commitment to consensus-building. Since much of the Court's caseload is selected by the Court itself through motions for leave to appeal, the Court is able to concentrate on the most important appeals.

THE COMMISSION'S MANDATE

The State Constitution mandates that the Commission nominate candidates for the Court of Appeals on the basis of merit. The statutorily-prescribed composition of the Commission, as well as the rules and regulations governing its selection procedures, ensure that the Governor is provided with nominees who are well-qualified to serve on the Court of Appeals. The Commission also endeavors to ensure that candidates from diverse geographic, professional and ethnic backgrounds, as well as from both genders, are among those considered for nomination.

THE COMPOSITION OF THE COMMISSION

The twelve-member Commission is appointed on a multi-partisan basis. The Constitution achieves this multi-partisan structure by authorizing various public and judicial officials to appoint the Commissioners. Appointments to the Commission are divided evenly among the three branches of government: the Governor and the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals each appoint four members to the Commission; the Speaker of the Assembly, the Assembly Minority Leader, the Senate Majority Leader and the Senate Minority Leader each appoint one member.

No member of the Commission may hold an elected or judicial office, or serve as an officer in a political party. Only two former judges may serve on the Commission at any time. At least four members of the Commission must be non-lawyers.

The Commissioners have traditionally come from both public and private life, from business, professional and education as well as legal and political backgrounds, and from across New York State. The Commissioners are not compensated for their service, and each serves a four-year term.

ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS FOR NOMINEES

In order to qualify for nomination, a candidate must be a resident of New York State and have been admitted to practice law in New York for at least 10 years. There are no other eligibility requirements. For example, a candidate need not have prior service as a judge and need not be a practicing lawyer.

THE PRE-NOMINATION PROCESS

Whenever a vacancy on the Court of Appeals arises, the Commission begins the nomination process which ultimately yields a short list of candidates for the Governor's selection. The nomination process is initiated when candidates submit applications to the Commission or are recommended by others. The Commission requires each candidate to answer a comprehensive questionnaire which covers the candidate's personal, education and professional background, legal experience and community activities. The Commission also requires each
