RE: STORY PROPOSAL: Examination of the U.S. Supreme Court's impeachable repudiation of congressionally-imposed obligations of disqualification & disclosure under 28 U.S.C. §455 and disregard for the single recommendation addressed to it by the 1993 Report of the National Commission on Judicial Discipline and Removal that it consider establishing an internal mechanism to review judicial misconduct complaints against its justices Attached is CJA's February 25, 2004 letter to Professor Steven Lubet – to which you are each indicated recipients because you either cite or quote him in your recent reporting.

CJA's referred-to November 6, 1998 impeachment complaint against ALL the Court's justices – pending uninvestigated in the House Judiciary Committee throughout these nearly 5-1/2 years – is an appropriate starting point for an evidence-based investigation into the Court's practices, policies, and procedures with respect to recusal – most importantly, investigation into the critical cert petition stage in cases where a party, unaided by any media attention, files a recusal application. Indeed, the November 6, 1998 impeachment complaint documentarily establishes the false and misleading nature of Chief Justice Rehnquist's January 26, 2004 identical letters to Senators Leahy and Lieberman regarding the Court's policies, practices, and procedures for recusal in precisely such a case. This is highlighted by CJA's February 12, 2004 letter to the Chief Justice – which should be the FIRST primary source document you read after CJA's February 25th letter to Professor Lubet.

These documents – as likewise CJA's February 13, 2004 and February 17, 2004 memos to Senators Leahy and Lieberman and the various Congressmen involved in the correspondence concerning Chief Justice Rehnquist's January 26th letter -- are all accessible from the homepage of CJA's website, www.judgewatch.org – from which you can also learn more about the achievements of our non-partisan, non-profit citizens' organization over the past 15 years in painstakingly documenting the corruption of the closed-door processes of judicial selection and discipline, for independent verification by the media.

Finally – and contrary to your various reporting which repeats the misinformation and misimpressions fostered by members of Congress – the situation in the lower federal courts and the state courts is no less worthless and sham with respect to recusal/disqualification, at least in cases garnering no media attention. This is likewise documentarily established by CJA's uninvestigated November 6, 1998 impeachment complaint, whose evidentiary record encompasses proceedings in the Second Circuit and New York state courts.

CJA is ready to provide you with full assistance in evaluating this explosive, far-reaching and completely non-partisan story – including “hard copies” of the primary source documents on which it is based. Please advise, as soon as possible, so that we may be guided accordingly.

Thank you.

RE: The EVIDENTIARY BASIS for assessing the U.S. Supreme Court's practices, policies, and procedures with respect to recusal

Dear Professor Lubet:

This follows up the second phone message I left on your voice mail yesterday (312-503-3100). The first was on Friday, February 6th – the same day you were cited in a New York Times article by Michael Janofsky, "Scalia's Trip With Cheney Raises Questions of Impartiality", in a paragraph about the Supreme Court that began, "Recusals are not uncommon".

According to Mr. Janofsky, you told him that in addition to "14 cases...decided over the last four full terms by fewer than the full complement of nine justices", which is how he described it in his article, you also stated that there were about 300 instances where justices had recused themselves from petitions for writs of certiorari.

How did you arrive at this figure? If it was from the summary orders by which the Court disposes of cert petitions, do these summary orders actually use the word "recuse" or "disqualify" or do they resort to some euphemism, as, for instance, that a particular justice "took no part", from which you have inferred recusal? How much do you actually know about these 300 instances? How many involve a justice's sua sponte action, as opposed to his granting of a party's recusal application? And as to these successful recusal applications, have you been able to access them from the Court so as to examine their content?

Of course, equally significant – if not more so – are instances where justices have NOT recused themselves, particularly in face of a party's recusal application. What research have you done to examine such instances?

Until my February 6th phone message, were you aware that the justices do NOT act upon all recusal applications they receive? And were you aware that the Court has a policy of NOT docketing recusal applications unless they are acted upon by the justices, thereby creating a FALSE RECORD to conceal the very existence of these unadjudicated applications? This is particularized by the primary source materials posted on CJA's website, www.judgewatch.org, brought to your attention in my February 6th message. Such message identified the specific primary source documents, accessible under the sidebar heading, "Test Cases-Federal (Mangano)", culminating in CJA's November 6, 1998 impeachment complaint against the justices, filed with the House Judiciary Committee.

In my yesterday's phone message, I updated you as to CJA's February 12, 2004 letter to Chief Justice Rehnquist, conveniently posted on our homepage. Such letter highlights the evidentiary significance of our November 6, 1998 impeachment complaint in exposing the false, misleading, and unsupported nature of the Chief Justice's January 26, 2004 identical letters to Senators Leahy and Lieberman about the Court's practices, policies, and procedures concerning recusals.

Your public comment to The New York Times and other media¹ about recusals at the Court and the reasonable questions raised as to the propriety of Justice Scalia's hunting trip with Vice President Cheney -- as well as your own widely published column(s) with respect thereto² -- are based on your preeminence as a judicial ethics scholar. As a scholar -- whose duty is the "follow the evidence wherever it leads" -- I trust you will embrace the opportunity to review and publicly comment upon the November 6, 1998 impeachment complaint underlying CJA's February 12, 2004 letter to the Chief Justice -- and upon the letter itself.

I look forward to your return call -- and to fruitful collaboration based on our shared concern for safeguarding the public interest in judicial impartiality and integrity.

Yours for a quality judiciary,

Dear Associate Justices:

Enclosed is the Center for Judicial Accountability's letter of today's date to Chief Justice Rehnquist. You are indicated recipients of the letter, with your response thereto expressly invited.

As further stated in the letter's concluding paragraph:

"Copies are also being furnished to Senators Leahy and Lieberman, to Congressman Conyers, Waxman, and Berman, as well as to House Judiciary Committee Chairman Sensenbrenner and Congressman Smith, Chairman of its Courts Subcommittee and Co-Chair of the House Working Group on Judicial Accountability. This, with a request that they not simply invite your responses, but secure them, by subpoena if necessary, as part of the House Judiciary Committee's long-overdue investigation of CJA's November 6, 1998 impeachment complaint against the Justices. Such investigation must proceed forthwith."

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist
U.S. Supreme Court
1 First Street, N.E.
Washington, D.C. 20543

RE: The Supreme Court's impeachable repudiation of congressionally-imposed obligations of disqualification & disclosure under 28 U.S.C. §455 and disregard for the single recommendation addressed to it by the 1993 Report of the National Commission on Judicial Discipline and Removal that it consider establishing an internal mechanism to review judicial misconduct complaints against its Justices

Dear Chief Justice Rehnquist:

This letter addresses your terse January 26, 2004 identical letters to Senators Patrick Leahy and Joseph Lieberman, responding to their joint letter of four days earlier. It also relates to the January 30, 2004 letter of Congressmen John Conyers and Henry Waxman, to which you have not yet responded. Additionally, it relates to the February 6, 2004 letter of Congressmen Conyers and Howard Berman, not addressed to you, but to Congressmen F. James Sensenbrenner and Lamar Smith, for House Judiciary Committee hearings.

Directly relevant to all these letters is the November 6, 1998 impeachment complaint which our non-partisan, non-profit citizens' organization filed with the House Judiciary Committee against the Supreme Court's Justices, individually and collectively. As of this date, more than five years later, it remains pending at the House Judiciary Committee, uninvestigated.

Nine copies of that impeachment complaint were sent to the Court under a November 6, 1998 coverletter for distribution to you and the eight other Justices. As for the petition for rehearing in the §1983 civil rights action Doris L. Sassower v. Hon. Guy Mangano, et al. (S.Ct. #98-106) on which the impeachment complaint rests, the Court received the required 40 copies.

RECEIVED

FEB 17 2004

OFFICE OF THE CLERK
SUPREME COURT, U.S.

Nonetheless, for your convenience, copies of these documents, as well as of the underlying petition for a writ of certiorari and supplemental brief¹, are enclosed.

As is immediately obvious, the petition for rehearing evidentiarily establishes the untruth of the claim made in your January 26th letter that each of the Supreme Court Justices “strives to abide by the provisions of 28 U.S.C. 455, the law enacted by Congress dealing with that subject”, as well as the misleading nature of your assertion,

“A Justice must examine the question of recusal on his own even without a motion and any party to a case may file a motion to recuse”.

Indeed, with its substantiating appendix of primary source documents [RA-], the rehearing petition provides an unprecedented “inside view” into the Court’s operations, exposing the unabashed lawlessness with which you and the eight Associate Justices exempted yourselves from 28 U.S.C. §455:

- (1) wilfully failing to adjudicate petitioner Doris Sassower’s written application to each of the nine Justices requesting their disqualification and/or disclosure pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §455 -- while summarily denying her cert petition;
- (2) wilfully ignoring the petitioner’s request for “legal authority or argument” to justify their failure to adjudicate her disqualification/disclosure application – and authorizing the creation of a false record by the Clerk’s office to omit the application’s very existence from the case docket so as to conceal that it was not adjudicated;

- (3) wilfully ignoring the petitioner's request for information as to the Court's procedures for judicial misconduct complaints against the Justices – including information as to the Court's response, if any, to the single recommendation addressed to it by the 1993 Report of the National Commission on Judicial Discipline and Removal that it:

“consider the adoption of policies and procedures for the filing and disposition of complaints alleging misconduct against Justices of the Supreme Court”;

- (4) wilfully ignoring the petitioner's improvised judicial misconduct complaint against the Justices, individually and collectively,

“based on their wilful failure to adjudicate [her] application for disqualification and disclosure, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §455, while proceeding to summarily deny [her] cert petition.”²

This sub silentio repudiation of 28 U.S.C. §455 and disrespect for the most rudimentary accountability, thereafter exacerbated by the Court's summary denial of the rehearing petition, was in the context of the petitioner's unopposed cert petition and supplemental brief detailing a record of corruption by the lower federal judiciary, unrestrained by any safeguards. These include the statutory safeguards of 28 U.S.C. §§455 and 144, pertaining to judicial disqualification and disclosure, and 28 U.S.C. §372(c), pertaining to the judicial misconduct complaint mechanism for lower federal judges reposed within the lower federal judiciary – as to whose efficacy the Judicial Conference was shown to have made knowingly false and misleading claims in its advocacy to Congress. Indeed, because the record in Sassower v. Mangano so decisively established that the lower federal judiciary had reduced these and other safeguards to absolute worthlessness, the cert petition did NOT seek the Court's discretionary review. Rather, it explicitly sought mandatory review under the Court's “power of supervision” or, at minimum, discharge of the Court's mandatory duty under ethical codes to refer the lower federal judges to appropriate disciplinary and criminal authorities. Such mandatory obligations were the first of the cert petition's two “Question Presented”. As for the cert petition's second “Question Presented”, its focus was the evisceration of 28 U.S.C. §§455, 144, and 372(c) by the lower federal judiciary, eerily foreshadowing issues that would become germane to the Court's own subsequent actions, to wit:

² Petitioner's October 14, 1998 letter to the Court's Clerk, p. 4 [RA-56].

“Is it misconduct per se for federal judges to fail to adjudicate or to deny, without reasons, fact-specific, fully-documented recusal motions?” (underlining added for emphasis)

and,

“If so, where is the remedy within the federal branch...?”

These transcendently important “Questions Presented” were explicated in the cert petition’s “Reasons for Granting the Writ” (at pp. 21-30), with the second “Question Presented” being Point II entitled,

“It is a Denial of Constitutional Due Process and Judicial Misconduct Per Se for a Court to Fail to Adjudicate, or to Deny Without Reasons, Fact-Specific, Documented Recusal Motions” (at p. 26, underlining added for emphasis).

The primary source documents contained in the rehearing appendix³, in particular,

- (1) petitioner’s unadjudicated and undocketed September 23, 1998 disqualification/disclosure application to the Court’s Justices pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §455 [RA-6];
- (2) petitioner’s September 29, 1998 letter to the Court’s Chief Deputy Clerk [RA-49];
- (3) petitioner’s October 14, 1998 letter to the Court’s Clerk, constituting her improvised judicial misconduct complaint against the justices, there being no complaint form or procedures [RA-52]; and
- (4) petitioner’s October 26, 1998 letters to the Court’s Chief Deputy Clerk and to its Clerk [RA-59; RA-62], constitute a truer, more edifying response to the questions posed by the January 22nd letter of Senators Leahy and Lieberman as to:

“what canons, procedures and rules are in place for Supreme Court justices to determine whether they must or should recuse themselves under 28 U.S.C 455(a) or any other relevant ethical rule or interpretation...[and] whether mechanisms exist for the Supreme Court to disqualify a Justice from participating in a matter or for review of a Justice's unilateral decision to decline to recuse himself."

than your own response:

"While a member of the Court will often consult with colleagues as to whether to recuse in a case, there is no formal procedure for Court review of the decision of a Justice in an individual case", which masks the Court's complete trashing of 28 U.S.C. §455, ethical codes of conduct, and any notion of accountability in the "individual case" of Sassower v. Mangano. It is for Congress to investigate the extent to which this brazen official misconduct, "rising to a level warranting [the Justices'] impeachment under the most stringent definition of impeachable offenses"⁴, is replicated in other "individual case[s]"⁵ reaching the Court without benefit of media attention.

As for the assertion in your January 26th letter that the reason "there is no formal procedure for Court review of the decision of a Justice in an individual case" is "because it has long been settled that each Justice must decide such a question for himself" -- which prompted both the January 30th letter of Congressmen Conyers and Waxman and the February 6th letter of Congressman Conyers and Berman -- you do not cite a single case establishing this supposedly "long settled" practice. Where are the decisions and memoranda "settling" the practice as to the Justices, which, if they relate to 28 U.S.C. §455(a), would not be earlier than 1974?

⁵ The existence of other cases was suggested by the Court's Chief Deputy Clerk, who asserted that:

"the general policy of the Clerk's office is not to docket recusal applications unless the Justices act upon them." (Petitioner's October 14, 1998 letter to the Court's Clerk, pp. 1-2 [RA-52-3]; emphasis in the original); See also, Petitioner's October 26, 1998 letter to the Court's Chief Deputy Clerk, p. 1 [RA-60].

Such general policy was today confirmed by the Clerk's office in response to a telephone inquiry on the subject.

The pertinent background to Congress' enactment of 28 U.S.C. §455, codifying what is now Canon 3E of the American Bar Association's Code of Judicial Conduct and making it applicable to the Court's Justices, was set forth in the rehearing petition (at p. 7) as follows:

“...[I]n 1974, when Congress enacted the current §455, it was over the vote of the Judicial Conference, disapproving it as ‘unnecessary’ because ‘..the ABA Code, relating to disqualification, is already in full force and effect in the Federal Judiciary by virtue of the adoption of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges by the Judicial Conference’ H.R. 93-1453, pp. 9-10. Among the precipitating events leading to the enactment was then Associate Justice Rehnquist’s failure to disqualify himself in Laird v. Tatum, 409 U.S. 824 (1972), reference to which appears in the legislative history. That failure has been characterized as ‘one of the most serious ethical lapses in the Court’s history’, in a book published before the current §455 was enacted, MacKenzie, John P., The Appearance of Justice, at 209, (1974)^{fn.5}”

As Senators Leahy and Lieberman pointed out, the standard set by 28 U.S.C. §455(a) is “not a subjective one”. Your January 26th letter fails to acknowledge this pivotal fact⁶. Yet, such is recognized not only by the Court’s majority opinion in Liljeberg v. Health Services Acquisition Corp., 486 U.S. 847 (1987):

“The general language of subsection (a) was designed to promote confidence in the integrity of the judicial process by replacing the subjective ‘in his opinion’ standard with an objective test. See S. Rep. No. 93-419, at 5; H.R. Rep. No. 93-1453, at 5.” (at 858), but by the dissenting opinion you yourself authored -- in which Justice Scalia joined:

^{fn.5} ““That the new [ABA] code could not induce proper conduct by Justice Rehnquist at the ethical watershed of his first term on the Supreme Court is simply another indication that action by Congress is essential and overdue’, id., at 228. [MacKenzie’s Appearance of Justice is cited in Wright, Miller & Cooper, Vol. 13A, Federal Practice and Procedure, 1995 supplement, at 551].”

⁶ Cf. Appearance of Justice, pp. 218-219, as to your failure to acknowledge the proper ABA standards for disqualification in your October 10, 1972 memorandum explaining your reasons for denying the motion made for your disqualification in Laird v. Tatum.

“Subsection (a) was drafted to replace the subjective standard of the old disqualification statute with an objective test. Congress hoped that this objective standard would promote public confidence in the impartiality of the judicial process by instructing a judge, when confronted with circumstances in which his impartiality could reasonably be doubted, to disqualify himself and allow another judge to preside over the case.” (at 870-71);

“...in drafting 455(a) Congress was concerned with the ‘appearance’ of impropriety, and to that end changed the previous subjective standard for disqualification to an objective one; no longer was disqualification to be decided on the basis of the opinion of the judge in question, but by the standard of what a reasonable person would think.” (at 872).

Since an “objective” standard governs, other Justices should be equally able, if not more so, to evaluate the “objective” reasonableness of questions raised as to another Justice’s impartiality. Consequently, the Court could --if it chose to -- “develop a formal procedure for reviewing the recusal decisions of Supreme Court justices”, as Congressmen Conyers and Waxman requested be considered.

Had the Justices discharged their constitutional, statutory, and ethical duty five years ago with respect to the Sassower v. Mangano cert petition and petition for rehearing, many of the issues now rightfully disturbing members of Congress – and the public at large – would have been appropriately addressed and adjudicated.

As to the foregoing, the Center for Judicial Accountability, Inc. (CJA) invites your response and, by eight copies of this letter to your eight Associate Justices, also invites theirs.

Copies are also being furnished to Senators Leahy and Lieberman, to Congressman Conyers, Waxman, and Berman, as well as to House Judiciary Committee Chairman Sensenbrenner and Congressman Smith, Chairman of its Courts Subcommittee and Co-Chair of the House Working Group on Judicial Accountability. RE: The Supreme Court's impeachable repudiation of congressionally-imposed obligations of disqualification & disclosure under 28 U.S.C. §455 and disregard for the single recommendation addressed to it by the 1993 Report of the National Commission on Judicial Discipline and Removal that it consider establishing an internal mechanism to review judicial misconduct complaints against its Justices

Enclosed is CJA's February 12, 2004 letter to Chief Justice Rehnquist, exposing the false, misleading, and unsupported nature of his January 26, 2004 letter to Senators Leahy and Lieberman, responding to theirs of four days earlier. This includes the Chief Justice's statement that the reason there is "no formal procedure for Court review of the decision of a Justice [not to recuse himself] in an individual case" is because "it has long been settled that each Justice must decide such a question for himself".

As you know, such statement prompted BOTH the January 30, 2004 letter of Congressmen Conyers and Waxman to the Chief Justice, as well as the February 6, 2004 letter of Congressmen Conyers and Berman to Congressmen Sensenbrenner and Smith, calling for House Judiciary Committee hearings.

As reflected by our letter's final paragraph, we request that you not simply invite the Chief Justice and the eight Associate Justices to respond to what our letter sets forth, but that you

"secure [their responses], by subpoena if necessary, as part of the House Judiciary Committee's long-overdue investigation of CJA's November 6, 1998 impeachment complaint against the Justices. Such investigation must proceed forthwith"

So that you may be assured that this is your absolute duty to do, CJA respectfully requests that you each personally examine the record evidence substantiating our November 6, 1998 impeachment complaint, which we long ago furnished to both the Republican majority and Democratic minority sides of the House Judiciary Committee. Such must be retrieved from the Committee's archive -- represented to exist by the 1993 Report of the National Commission on Judicial Discipline and Removal (at p. 35).

As I have been informed that your offices are not receiving outside mail due to heightened security precautions occasioned by the recent ricin incident, copies of our November 6, 1998 impeachment complaint and the other enclosures to our February 12th letter to the Chief Justice are not being mailed to you, as they otherwise would. ALL such documents, however, are posted on CJA's website: www.judgewatch.org, accessible under the heading, "Test Cases-Federal (Mangano)".

Thank you.

Enclosed is CJA's February 13, 2004 memo – refaxed this morning to ensure your complete receipt of all its pages. Such memo must be personally read by the indicated Senators and Congressmen themselves, not merely by staff (some of whom suffer from direct conflicts of interest arising from their underlying official misconduct¹), and CJA hereby so-requests.

¹ This official misconduct is established by primary source materials posted on CJA's website, www.judgewatch.org. Such includes their personal involvement in the outright fraud which the House Judiciary Committee perpetrated on Congress and the American People by its November 29, 2001 "oversight hearing" of the "operations of federal judicial misconduct statutes" – and the resulting "Judicial Improvements Act of 2002" (to which the February 6, 2004 letter of Congressmen Conyers and Berman expressly refers). See, website sidebar "Correspondence-Federal Officials": inter alia, CJA's July 31, 2001, September 4, 2001, July 30, 2002, and July 31, 2002 correspondence to House Judiciary Committee counsel. Also, CJA's June 4, 2003 letter/memo to Senator Kennedy (at pp. 5-10).
