

Reminder: AOL will never ask you to send us your password or credit card number in an email. This message has been scanned for known viruses.

From: judgewatchers@aol.com
To: lylden@aol.com
Cc: Dahlia.Lithwick@slate.com, cgrimes@syr.edu, nscherer@wellesley.edu, kjbybee@maxwell.syr.edu, mjobbie@syr.edu, semortim@syr.edu, ladolak@law.syr.edu, bekaufma@syr.edu, stober@toberlaw.com, lee-epstein@northwestern.edu
Subject: Thank you! -- Building Honest Scholarship & Pedagogy: March 21 memo and attached materials
Date: Fri, 23 Mar 2007 4:07 PM

Dear Mr. Denniston,

I appreciate your kind acknowledgment of Dahlia's forwarding my e-mails to you -- and take this opportunity to again thank her.

I was unable to locate contact information for you from your Scotus blog -- and such was also not provided to me by the Institute for the Study of the Judiciary, Politics, and the Media, which appears not to have forwarded my correspondence to you, as I had requested.

As to my "disagreement" with remarks made by panelists at the October 19, 2006 Institute symposium in which you participated, my critique of your remarks appears at pages 4-6 of my November 17, 2006 letter to Director Keith Bybee -- to which you were an indicated recipient.

I would be most pleased to discuss with you how you would reconcile your symposium remarks with the contrary evidence presented by the primary source documents to which my letter refers. In so doing, you would be providing a much-needed role-model of honesty and professional responsibility for the other panelists and the Institute to emulate.

Perhaps, too, you could lead the way in reporting on the historic "disruption of Congress" case -- now headed to the U.S. Supreme Court on a petition for a writ of certiorari -- embodying much of this evidence.

I look forward to a constructive, evidence-based exchange -- and again thank you.

Elena Sassower

-----Original Message-----

From: lylden@aol.com
To: judgewatchers@aol.com
Sent: Fri, 23 Mar 2007 1:20 PM
Subject: Your March 21 letter and attached materials

Ms Sassower:

Dahlia Lithwick has, as you requested, forwarded to me your letter and the accompanying documents. I am sorry that you did not have contact information for me earlier. I understand you had some disagreement with remarks made at a symposium at Syracuse in October, in which I participated.

Regards,
Lyle Denniston

AOL now offers free email to everyone. Find out more about what's free from AOL at AOL.com.