Dear Professors Calvert and Richards,

I have received no response from either of you to my October 3rd e-mail, which I herewith resend. Please advise as to a convenient date and time for me to call you.

Additionally, I would appreciate the names of your colleagues to whom you presented the lawsuit theories advanced by your article -- and to whom your article refers at page 23.

As the lawsuit must be filed within less than a month, your prompt response is essential.

Thank you.

Dear Professors Calvert and Richards,

In response to Professor Calvert's disappointing and rather incomprehensible September 24th e-mail, please advise when it would be convenient for me to telephone either or both of you about the two-fold issues presented by my original September 9th e-mail. I would like to call you on thursday or friday -- and would appreciate if you could tell me the time that would best accomodate your schedules.

By way of update, on September 26th, I filed a complaint to New York Times Public Editor Byron Calame to which he has already responded. That September 26th complaint and his September 30th response are posted on CJA's website, www.judgewatch.org, under "PRESS SUPPRESSION-THE NEW YORK TIMES".

Finally, a propos of the observation in your law review article that The Times' "masthead slogan, 'All the News That's Fit to Print'" is understood by readers to be "a covenant of truth and accuracy", I draw your attention to the fact that posted on our website is our June 30, 1992 complaint to Arthur Sulzberger, Jr., transmitting to him a copy of our complaint of that date to the New York Department of Consumer Affairs that such motto was a false and misleading advertising claim.

Thank you.
