Dean John Sexton
New York University School of Law
40 Washington Square South
New York, New York 10003

Dear Dean Sexton:

I cannot but express my shock and disappointment at your failure to respond to my letter dated November 15, 1994, as well as your disregard of my several telephone messages left with your secretary since then. She was informed of the exigency of the matter--which exigency is also reflected by my letter's concluding sentence.

A copy of the letter is enclosed for your convenience. From its content--and enclosures--you could see the transcending public issues involved, affecting not only me, a distinguished law school alumna, but the public at large and the profession in particular.

Frankly, I would not have wasted the postage in sending the materials to you that I did, but for your express invitation that I do so when I attended the August fund-raiser for the benefit of the pro bono student loan repayment program.

My cert petition was filed on February 27, 1995 by NYU law alumnus Jeremiah Gutman, Esq., '49, first in his class and Editor-in-Chief of our law review. A copy is enclosed herewith.

I hope that after you read it, you will favor me with a response appropriate from the dean of a law school that not only teaches the importance of the rule of law, but of public interest commitment.

I will be at the 40th Reunion of my class at the end of this month. However, I would hope that before then you will schedule a personal meeting with me, as you yourself had offered to do when we spoke back in August.

Very truly yours,

DORIS L. SASSOWER, Director
