Subject: The "Impossibility of Fair Judgment" Standard of Liteky

Date: Tue, 16 Oct 2007 11:38 am

Dear Richard,

I tried to e-mail you several times in August, which I don't know if you received. Hope your wife has continued to recover from her hospitalization and that you are otherwise well.

Can you tell me whether you are familiar with any cases, in the 13 years since Liteky v. United States, 510 US 540 (1994), in which a court has found that its "impossibility of fair judgment" standard for judicial disqualification for pervasive actual bias had been met?

Thanks.

Elena
