Honorable Sir:

I do not fault your giving Education "top priority", but believe this should include most particularly the manner by which the Education Department of the State of New York conducts itself.

About five (5) years ago I made complaint about the accounting firm of Rashba & Pokart, which was assigned Case No. 8607632, by the New York City Office of Professional Discipline.

After clear and confirmed instances of egregious corruption not only by Rashba & Pokart, but with the Office of Professional Discipline, it was turned over to the "watch-dog" of the "watch-dogs" in that office, resulting in the "chief watch-dog" being corrupted.

Quis Custodiet Ipsos Custodes? [Who Guards the Guardians?].

I would appreciate a report on the matter, and believe that such report would be of very great interest to you, as the representative of this district.

Is this the type of "educational conduct", tolerated by the Education Department, that should guide students in their future lives?

Respectfully,

GEORGE SASSOWER
