Dear Paul,

Thanks for your telling response.

Attached are the Center for Judicial Accountability's press releases #1 & #2 about our groundbreaking public interest lawsuit against The New York Times. These were e-mailed to Columbia Journalism Review Daily on their March 22nd and June 9th release dates – without response – and were attached to correspondence dated July 13th, which I gave, in hand, to your boss, Steve Lovelady, on July 14th – without response from him or from other Columbia Journalism School recipients: Associate Dean Jeff Richard and Columbia Journalism Review Chairman Victor Navasky, Publisher Evan Cornog, and Executive Editor Michael Hoyt.

After you read the July 13th correspondence – and review the referred-to webpages and documents on CJA's website, www.judgewatch.org – I suggest you pursue an investigative expose into conflicts of interest and disregard of the most basic standards of professional and ethical responsibility at Columbia Graduate School of Journalism ...

May you be true to the advertised mission of Columbia Journalism Review and the Daily for which you write (see fn. 3 of our July 13th letter) by meeting the challenge of this great and important story. I will await your response before addressing the higher-ups at Columbia Graduate School of Journalism and elsewhere about this serious matter.

Thank you again.

Elena

Elena,

I'm not totally sure what you're getting at here. Who filed this lawsuit, and when?

Best,
Paul
